#1 VoIP Provider for Small Business as selected by PCMag readers.

Ooma Office. The best choice for your small business.

Small businesses aspire to create and maintain a professional image that will attract new customers in the most cost-effective manner possible. One of the biggest hurdles that small businesses face when working towards that larger-than-life image is finding a phone system that provides the features that larger businesses use. Such phone systems are not geared towards the typical small business. They are generally very costly to install and to maintain, making them a less desirable choice for savvy small business owners.

Fortunately, Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP) telephone systems such as Ooma Office have emerged that can bring the power of a professional phone setup to any small business owner. Ooma Office is a flexible telephone system that requires no new equipment or wiring and delivers crystal clear voice quality. Best of all, it has plenty of features to help small business owners craft a professional image that rivals their big business counterparts, all at an affordable price.

Advanced Features Make Your Business Sound Larger Than Life

A customer's first impression of your business might be a lasting one, and a telephone system like Ooma Office can help to build a professional image from the very first phone call. Here are just a few of the features that Ooma Office offers to all of its customers:

Virtual Receptionist

Big businesses typically employ a semi-automated answering system to help direct callers to the correct person or to get them the information that they need. The Virtual Receptionist acts as a first point of contact for Ooma Office, answering calls professionally and routing them to where they need to go.

Easy Set-Up

No need for professional installation or support. Step-by-step installation and 24/7 support means you'll be up and running in about 30 minutes.

Ring Groups

When there are two or more individuals that handle calls of a specific type (such as support or accounting inquiries), a Ring Group can help a customer get their call answered faster. Ooma Office allows small businesses to set up Ring Groups that are similar to those used by larger companies, where incoming calls can ring all of the phones in the group either one at a time, or all at once. You can even direct the call to a voicemail box just for the Ring Group if no one answers after a certain amount of time.

Ooma Office Offers Feature-Rich Service at a Low Monthly Cost

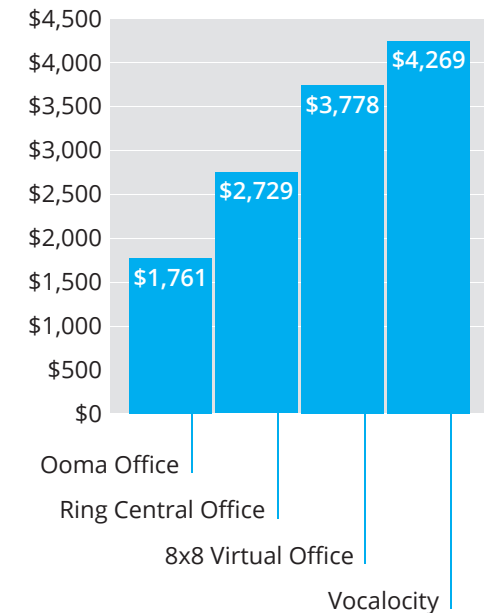

Small businesses may find that installing traditional telephone service costs more than they are willing or able to spend. Many landlines force a one-size-fits-all approach onto their customers, forcing them to pay for capacity they don't need. Even worse, landline providers are notorious for charging extra for basic features such as voicemail, and for locking business customers into contracts that are up to three years long.

With Ooma Office there is no expensive PBX equipment to purchase and IP phones are not a mandatory part of the system. You can even choose not to install any hardware at all. Even better, there are no additional installation or activation costs to get started.

If you choose a hardware setup, there is a one-time fee to purchase the Ooma Office Base Station. If you choose a cloud-based setup, then there are no startup costs. Whichever setup you choose, basic service costs as little as $19.95/month and includes all of the features listed above along with much, much more. Additional phone users can be added for just $19.95/month. This fee includes an extra phone number for each user, giving a small business to start with the right telephone capacity and to grow at its own pace.
